Coalition of National Park Service Retirees

Mission:

In pursuit of its vision for the National Park Service, the Coalition of National Park Service Retirees studies, educates, speaks, and acts for preservation and protection of America's National Park System and the mission of the National Park Service.

Vision:

The CNPSR participates in the national dialog regarding the management of America's National Park System.

The Coalition is considered to be a principal stakeholder in the planning and decision-making processes, a status that reflects the more than 11,000 years of experience in National Park Service management and operations that its members possess.

The Coalition works with other interested parties to assure that management decisions made by current NPS leaders are consistent with the legislative guidelines enacted by previous Congresses.

In May, 2003, three former high-ranking National Park Service employees spoke at a press conference in Washington DC against actions being taken by political leaders that were having detrimental effects on the National Park Service and the National Park System. At the same time, a letter was sent to President Bush and Interior Secretary Norton, signed by 20 NPS retirees, voicing similar concerns.

Since that time, more than 690 additional former NPS employees, many of whom were senior managers of the agency, have joined the Coalition to monitor and respond to the decisions and actions of the political leadership of the Department of the Interior and the NPS.

As park managers, rangers and employees in other disciplines, we devoted our professional lives to maintaining and protecting our national parks for the benefit of all Americans - both living and those yet to be born.

Coalition Membership Increases to 690

Never before in the 90 year history of the National Park Service have so many retired employees come together to voice concern about threats to the Service and system to which they devoted their professional careers.

We know that many more of our former National Park Service colleagues, who have served under several different Administrations, both Republican and Democratic, agree with our concerns.

We have served this country well, and our credibility and integrity in speaking out on these issues should not go ignored. We count among our members:

- 5 former Directors or Deputy Directors of the National Park Service
- 23 former Regional Directors or Deputy Regional Directors
- 28 former Associate or Assistant Directors at the national or regional office level
- 74 former Division Chiefs at the national or regional office level
- 150 former Park Superintendents or Asst. Superintendents
- Numerous Division Chiefs, Supervisors and other employees who served at the park level

CNPSR Gun Impact Report

SURVEY: 77 PERCENT OF NPS, FISH & WILDLIFE EXPERTS SAY PROPOSED GUN RULE WILL HURT MANAGEMENT OF NATIONAL PARKS, WILDLIFE REFUGES

TUSCON, AZ.///October 14, 2008/// More than three out of four (77 percent) of 1,400 present and former employees of the National Park Service (NPS) and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (USFWS) predict that the controversial Department of Interior (DOI) proposed rule reversing the long-standing prohibition of carrying loaded, concealed weapons in National Parks and Wildlife Refuges will have an adverse affect on the ability of NPS and USFWS employees to accomplish their mission.

This finding and others are contained in "Natural and Cultural Resource Impacts and Management Consequences of the Proposed Regulation to Authorize the Possession of Concealed Firearms in Units of the National Park & National Wildlife Refuge Systems," a major new report the Coalition of National Park Service Retirees (CNPSR), which now has more than 690 members. While DOI has neglected to provide an analysis of the potential impacts of its proposed rule, CNPSR surveyed in excess of 1,400 present and former employees of the National Park Service and the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service to assess the impacts that these experts foresee should the regulation go into effect. Other key results of the survey include:

- 75 percent feel that there will be an increase in opportunistic or impulse wildlife killings in parks and refuges
- 83 percent of survey respondents anticipated that the proposal will increase the overall level of complexity for management of their park or refuge.

In issuing the report, CNPSR emphasized that DOI violated the procedural requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) and the Endangered Species Act (ESA) in failing to adequately examine the foreseeable impacts of the relaxed gun regulation. Additionally, CNPSR asserts that DOI should have consulted the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service pursuant to ESA, as 89 threatened or endangered species inhabit the parks that would be affected by the regulation.

The new CNPSR report highlights the enforcement complexities and threats to public safety that should have been addressed in an analysis of reasonable alternatives to the rule under NEPA.

THE COALITION STRATEGIC PLAN: A VISION FOR THE NATIONAL PARK SERVICE IN ITS SECOND CENTURY

As the National Park Service nears the beginning of its second century, the national parks and all they represent have evolved from units of a respected national system into the combined expression of our most valuable and inalienable national heritage. They are the unchanging measure of a rapidly changing world, repositories of information against which human progress or its opposite can be gauged, touchstones of who we are as a people and even as members of the human species, the best hope for preserving the cultural record that defines American civilization and the global biological diversity upon which life itself depends.

At a crucial time—when the United States may decide whether to retain the benefits of victories painfully won over decades or to risk losing them to narrow, short-term, and private interests—the Coalition of National Park Service Retirees declares its vision of a National Park Service that by August 25, 2016:

- Preserves and enables visitors to enjoy the truly special places of our common heritage—the inalienable heritage—of our nation, without confusion about its mission.
- Is deeply involved with the American people in what it means to be American and with the people of the world about what it means to be human.
- Is viewed by the public and government officials not as a “land management agency” but as the steward of the primary ideas and ideals held in trust as the nation’s heritage.
- Educates visitors through deeply personal experiences of profoundly important places.
- Leads, encourages, and assists all others in our country who pursue similar goals; and on behalf of the United States assists all others in the world who pursue similar goals.
- Is free of burdens that impede accomplishment of its mission, and has leadership that is free of inappropriate constraints and conflicting goals.
- Is well-funded, well-staffed, sophisticated, professional, value-driven, motivated, innovative, daring, and excellent, within a context of long-term continuity.
- Provides education, training, and career opportunities that maximize fulfillment of the professional potential of each employee.
- Is managed as a coherent system rather than as independent areas and programs.
- Is driven by a current and constantly-renewed vision, nationally and in each individual park.
