parks and have been an important component of the ongoing dialogue about preserving parks for future generations.

The 1872 award is given annually by the Coalition to an individual for their outstanding service and support for the mission of the Coalition. This year, we have selected outgoing Executive Council Chair, Maureen Finnerty. Maureen has served on the Executive Council for the past twelve years, six of which she served as Chair. Maureen has led a wide variety of advocacy for parks and the National Park System has remained a central focus of the Coalition. Efforts to influence decision-making that protect park values have included input to the courts of law, the court of public opinion, Congress, and other land management agencies.

What We’re Reading & Tracking This Month

The Coalition has actively been expressing concern with the growing number of federal efforts to undermine the protection of new and existing national monuments. Trump's move to eliminate national monument protection at Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante leaves the lands in federal hands -- but how they would be managed is very different. The move has gotten a lot of attention across media and new audiences are learning what these changes actually mean. Teen Vogue recently wrote an article describing the changes.

Betty Reid Soskin, a political and community activist was recognized by President Obama and awarded the silver service medallion by the National WWII Museum. She also happens to be America's oldest active national park ranger. Travel and Leisure recently featured a story on her.

Looking for some inspiration to spur on a national park adventure this winter? National Park Foundation has got you covered. Read about winter sports in 10 national parks.
